Named the Most Trusted Government Agency five consecutive years and the sixth Most Trusted Business in the nation by the Ponemon Institute, the Postal Service has annual revenue of more than $68 billion and delivers nearly half the world's mail. If it were a private sector company, the U.S. Postal Service would rank 26th in the 2008 Fortune 500. The USPS website is the best place to look when you need to find the nearest USPS location. Other places to look include a mailbox locator website, online directories and traditional printed directories.USPS AppWhen you need to visit the Post Office to take advantage of the package or letter mailing service, one quick option is to open the USPS mobile app and allow it to use your device's location to locate the nearest office. This generates a map that shows the nearest office in comparison to your current location. The USPS mobile app can also perform the same tasks as the full website.USPS Lookup by AddressThere are a variety of options in the locator tool to find different types of offices. You can search for the nearest Post Office, approved postal provider, self-service kiosk, collection box, or office that handles passports, greeting cards and stamp collecting supplies. These options are available by clicking the dropdown list under Location Types. You then enter your city and state or zip code and the maximum distance you want to search. You'll need to be signed into your account to see the search results, but it's free to set up the account.Mailbox LocatorsA mailbox locator service that specializes in mail delivery service can show you the closest spot to drop off a letter or package, according to Mailbox Locator. These services may offer the geolocation function through your computer or mobile device, to generate results with a map, turn-by-turn directions to the nearest postal drop box or a written version of the street location of the closest postal box.Online Directories to Find the Nearest USPS OfficeOnline versions of phone directories are another place you can check to find the locations of USPS Post Offices in your area. To use these directories, you can allow them to use your location to generate results if that option pops up. You also have the option to enter keywords, such as USPS, or Post Office, and add your location in the form of city and state or your zip code. The results after clicking enter show nearby USPS locations.Finding the USPS Office in a Paper Phone DirectoryUsing a traditional printed phone directory is another way to find the nearest USPS location. In the white pages section, you can look under the letter U, for the first letter in the word United in the postal service's official title. In the yellow pages section of the print directory, look under G for government, and then scan the page to find either USPS or United States Postal Service. When you find the listing, it should include the street address as well as the phone number to call if you want to talk to someone from the postal service before visiting.
